Danville, Va., July 9, 1884.

People from Henry county say that B. F. Richardson, who killed his brother Albert last Sunday at the home of their mother, near Leatherwood Store, Henry county, was a most disagreeable fellow every way, and as he was a moonshiner besides, the officers of the United States were also after him. He was abusing his mother at a round rate, and Albert, though about fen years younger, tried to put a check to him. round raie, and Albert, though acheck to him, and when a quarrel ensued Albert, to de-fend himself, took up a piece of plank, whereupon Richardson seized a chair and best him to death.

Judge Paul opened the session of the United States District Court here yesterday and delivered a charge to the grand jury which, the lawvers say, had "the true ring about it; and if only the grand juries and officers of his court will be guided by such judicial utterances as they heard from Judge Paul, we shall soon hear nothing but words of commendation for the courts of the United States." As regards the intimidation of voters, Judge Paul enjoined that the grand jury must confine their inquiries the grand jury must confine their inquiries to matters pertaining to Federal elections, and they had nothing to do with State elec-

Persons from Franklin county say that the crop of wheat was the best ever made in the county, and there was never a better prospect as to the crops still to mature. No liquor is sola at Rocky Mount, and some of the merchants in the adjoining sections have quit seiling it. I am told.

One of the wealthy planters from Caswell county, N. C., says that the tobacco in one of his fields is as high as his shoulder.

Another decision of Juage Paul's, given to the grand jury, has afforded much satisfaction: "In the prosecution for retailing inquor without Heense It is not every selling that will constitute the offence of carrying on the business of a retail liquor dealer. If you find that a man has merely occasionally sold a small quantity of liquor to a friend or neighbor as an accommodation, as in case of sickness and the like, you will not be justifiable in finding an indictment against him; but if from the evidence before you you believe he is engaged in selling liquor as a business—as a matter of freffic—out of which to make a profit, and is thus engaged in a business to carry on which other persons are compelled to pay a license, he is liable to indictment. Your intelligent observation of the affairs and conduct of men generally will enable you to draw the distinction which I have endeavored to make."

[Pall-Mall Gazette.]

At the time when we are demanding the suppression of the gaming-tables at Monte-Carlo it may be interesting to read the following account of a visit paid recently by a casual contributor to a gambling hell in London: We walked Itoward the Tottenham-Court road that I might each the bus. Too late, however, the last one had gone. There was nothing for me, then, but to make up my mind to invest half a dollar on a cab. My companion suggested I should go in with him to his club for half an hour. Agreed, I entered, no questions asked; I suppose the fact of my belog in a member's company was sufficient. He opened a door and ushered me in, and the first exchanation I heard was "Keno" and a grunt of satisfaction. Silver was rapidly counted and passed along to this individual. I was considerably taken aback at the business printed figures. The croupler, banker, or whatever be may be termed, stood at the end of the table facing the company and rapidly revolving a box not unlike a miniature washing-machine. At each revolution he released an ivery- or bone-ticket bearing a number, which he quickly called aloud, and placed upon an index or tablet also in front of him. The gamesters being armed or provided with any number of those printed cards, for each one of which they have to pay 3d, to the proprietor, are also supplied with a quantity of red counters. The cards, all bearing dufferent series of figures, are rapidly scanned by the holders, and as a number is called by the man in charge, banker or whatever he may be, a corresponding number is covered on the card with a counter until such time as one of the card-helders covers five figures in a horizontal position, or perses the eard withen to

The Grand Army boys were carly at their headquarters, and busied themselves by making final arrangements and putting on finishing touches preparatory to the rousing reception which they proposed to give to the men who formerly fought them on southern battle-fields. Broad street was gar in profusion of bunting, and the httle flags on the horse-cars waved merrily in the breeze. The large flags on the City Hall and the county buildings bent their poles, and at the various engine-houses all the bunting at the command of the companies was displayed. They were drawn up in double file. The

When comparative quiet was restored
Mayor Haynes stepped forward and extended a heariy greeting to the visitors.
He said:

Richmond Light Infantry Blues, Robert E. Lee Camp, and Phil. Kearacy Post; On behalf of Lincoln Post, No. 11, 1 heartily welcome you to our city. Twenty ago we dreaded your coming. Then were armed with the deadly musket. were armed with the deadly musket. To-day you come in peace, with no more dangerous weapon in your hands than a cane. In the past you were very reckless in the use of firearms. You had an utter disregard of other people's safety, and the making of widows and orphans was a part of your business. To-day you are joining hands with your late enemies in helping to develop our common, country. The time now, the first time that Newark has had the honor and pleasure of welcoming you, the two colors mingle harmoniously in the good fellowship of brothers. You have had a long and tedious ride, and are no donbt worn out with the wear and tear of travel. I will not detain you here any longer. We have provided an entertainment for you where your physical wants will be attended to. I can only sincerely wish that good digestion will wait upon your appetites, and referate that the people of Newark heartily and cordially welcome you to their city, hoping that when you leave us we will long hold a place in your memory.

Judge Flournoy, representing Mayor Carrington, of Richmond, responded to the greeting of Mayor Haynes. After thanking the Mayor and the people of Newark for their welcome Mr. Flournoy said:

Comrades, we have to be thankful, not only for the represion given to us by the Conrades, we have to be thankful, not only for the reception given to us by the men, but for the kindly manner in which we are received by the fair women of this fair city. There may be some doubt as to who made man, but there is no doubt whatever that food made woman. Wherever the soldier has shed his blood, woman, angel woman, has ever been near to stop the flow. When the wounded warrior tossed upon the cot in feverish agony a woman's soft and soothing hand fell upon his heated brow, and the oath, partly formed by his suffering, froze upon his lips. Wherever and whenever man has suffered woman has carried the cross and calmed his soul.

A FALLING HOUSE. The Inmates Nurrowly Escape Death in the Ruins.

Yesterday morning at 9:45 o'clock an alarm of fire was turned in from Station 3, and the department responded promptly. It turned out, however, that there was no fire, but that the twe-story dwelling, an old and somewhat dilapidated structure, standing at No. 1407 Frankin street, had fallen ing at No. 1407 Franklin street, had fallen in, and was a complete week.

On the west side of this house an excavation was being made for the purpose of erecting a new building, and this caused the foundation of the other house to give way and bring the building to the ground. The ruin was perfect, and in the débris, which spread out some distance on the sidewalk, could be seen the remnuts of furniture and utensils of trade owned by the occupants, all indiscriminately mixed in the mass of fallen timbers, mortar, and rubbish.

Quite a number of people lived in the house, among them Mrs. Mary Carrigan and five children. She was at the market at the time of the accident, and when the house began to topple all of the children ran out safely except a little girl about eight years of age. She made her escape to an adjacent house, with which the falling one communicated, and here in the second story secreted herself under a bed. The shock of the falling house caused the plas-

The funeral of Misses Williams and Gibson, the two girls drowned at Old Point Monday, took place from St. James Bpuscopal church yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The crowd was such that by 9:45 near about half of those who came were turned away with the information that the church was full; that no more could be adchurch was full; that no more could be ad-mitted. mitted. Not only were all the seats occupied but much of the standing-room.

The two girls, cousins, lived within a very short distance of each other, and near sixth and Leigh streets the two sad processions united, and the two hearses moved on together, and the coffins were borne into the church, one closely following the other.

The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Sprigg, editor of the Southern Charchman. The reading of the lessons fell with more than ordinary soiemnity upon the hushed assemblage, and there were hundreds of tearful eyes. The two hymns sung were "I would not live always" and "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

Miss Williams was buried in the family section at Hollwood and Miss Gibson in the family section at Shockoe. The offerings of flowers were very large. They were of all the designs that could suggest the pure young hearts of the deceased and the blessed life of immortality into which they have entered.

Died at His Bray.

Henry Claiborne, a colored man fifty-four years of age, died on Fourteenth street between Main and Cary yesterday morning. He had been loading a dray of which he was driver, and was seized with a vomiting speil and soon thereafter died. He was a sober man, and it is thought probable that death was caused by internal hemor-rhage. Deceased was a member of the Fishermen of Galilee and of the Rising Sons of Hope.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES.

The Order in Which They Will Meet-A New Rule.

Rule.

After the announcement by President Bass this evening of the memoers of the bedy appointed by him on the joint standing committees of the Council, the Council committee-list will be complete.

In order to avoid confusion in the meetings of the committees for organization, the following instructions have been issued to Sergeant-at-Arms August by President Bass, of the Board of Aldermen, and President Ellyson, of the Common Council:

"Notices for committee meetings will be issued according to the order in which they are named in the rules of the Council, except the Committee on Grounds and Buildings and Board of Public Interests, which will be given precedence, as it is important that they should meet immediately. At least two committees must be organized each day."

These instructions will be strictly adhered to. Each committee elects a chair-man, and some of them elect several im-portant efficers. The organization of the committees will commence Friday and be continued from day to day until the list is
